COROWARE ANNOUNCES AVAILABILITY OF USAGE REPORTER FOR VIDYO SYSTEMS

Software Package Enables Tracking and Reporting of System Usage

Redmond, WA – April 6, 2010 – CoroWare Technologies, a wholly owned subsidiary of CoroWare, Inc. (COWI.OB) and reseller of Vidyo® brand video conferencing systems, announced availability of the CoroWare Usage Reporter for Vidyo, a software package that provides usage statistics for Vidyo brand high-definition video conferencing systems.

Enterprise customers are looking for solutions that will help their IT organizations monitor and analyze Vidyo system use. Combined with Vidyo's award-winning high-definition video conferencing systems, the CoroWare Usage Reporter for Vidyo is an affordable and effective way for customers to generate video conferencing usage statistics that can be used to distribute costs and make informed purchasing decisions.

“CoroWare’s usage metering solution offers Vidyo customers greater visibility into their video conferencing usage and deployment,” said Ira Weinstein, senior analyst and partner at Wainhouse Research. “By providing users with easy access to key usage metrics, CoroWare allows organizations to plan for future deployments and accurately assess the benefits and ROI associated with their video conferencing investments.”

CoroWare Usage Reporter for Vidyo is a Windows-based software package that analyzes detailed video conferencing call records, including the number of Vidyo rooms, ports, users, and conference call minutes.

“We had multiple customers coming to us with the same requirement,” said Joshua Sherman, Manager of CoroWare’s Telepresence business unit. “We recognized the opportunity to create a solution that enables them to see exactly how their technology investment is being used.”
